AIJA has appointed Guillermo Bayas (pictured), partner of the litigation department and head of international development at AGM Abogados, as co-vice president of the litigation commission.

Bayas graduated as a lawyer from Pompeu Fabra University and holds a master of laws degree from New York University, a postgraduate specialisation in civil litigation from IDEC-UPF, a postgraduate degree in international relations from CIDOB and a diploma in arbitration from the Business Institute.

AIJA (International Association of Young Lawyers) has more than 4000 members from 90 countries and it is the only lawyers' association for professionals under the age of 45. Also, its litigation commission is in charge of promoting and organising events in the area of commercial litigation, such as the annual litigation conference or specific seminars in this area.
