Andersen will move its headquarters in Sevilla to the Columbus building, located in Avenida de la Palmera, in order to continue with its growth plan in Andalusia.

The new offices will allow the firm to double the size of its current facilities in order to have the best spaces, prioritising the needs of professionals and clients.

From this move, the firm will make a great innovative commitment from a technological point of view, making the Seville office the most advanced in Spain in this respect.

"The new facilities will allow us to grow quantitatively and qualitatively, having more space and the latest technologies at the service of our professionals and clients", said the managing partners of Andersen, José Vicente Morote and Iñigo Rodríguez-Sastre.
