Bigle Legal, a Contract Lifecycle Management (CLM) technology company, opens its new office in Madrid, consolidating its leadership in the legal tech sector and targeting strategic cities for generating business. The company sustains its growth thanks to a type of solution that saves up to 9% of annual profits for corporations in all types of sectors, through the intelligent management and automation of contracts.

The new Bigle Legal office, located at Calle María de Molina 39, joins its headquarters in Barcelona, its office in London and its extensive network of partners in Europe and Latin America. The opening in the capital, as part of the growth in focus cities, serves Bigle Legal to consolidate its position in the legal tech market; a sector on the rise with an investment that, in 2021, was close to 3,000 million euros worldwide and that is already bidding high in the United States or the United Kingdom.

Alejandro Esteve de Miguel, CEO of the company, highlights that the CLM is implemented in the legal department but assists all areas of the organizations: "One of the values of Bigle Legal is that it helps any professional who works with contracts, whether be it human resources, finance or purchasing". He adds that any organization or company manages contracts on a day-to-day basis and that sectors such as banking, consumer goods or insurance are already benefiting from the solution.

During the current year, Bigle Legal has reinforced its workforce with new additions to its team in strategic areas of business growth, large accounts and product development, with senior professionals who have more than 10 years of experience in the development of growth in multinationals.
