Next november 30, Madrid will become the world capital of LegalTech with the Global LegalTech Hub Day 2022 (GLTHDay).

The event will have an in-person and online format with the international broadcasting of content for 24 hours non-stop and will feature round tables and conferences by more than 50 international professionals.

The GLTHDay organising committee is made up of experts in the field, Laura Fauqueur (Legal Shake), Sara Molina (Deloitte Legal) and Raquel García (Clifford Chance) and will focus on two fundamental pillars: people and the internal legal departments of large corporations.

Another of the novelties for this year will be the introduction of the legal sector in the metaverse, the unique advantages offered by this new virtual environment for firms and the new market niches it opens up.

"The aim of GLTHDay 2022 is to connect with professionals from all continents to make visible the great moment legaltech is going through. We want to mark the milestones of 2023 in technology applied to business and dedicate the day to what will be the future. The success of organisations will depend, to a large extent, on what they do with people when technology arrives and we will talk about solutions. Today we lay the first stone of what will be the biggest event that Spain has held to date in this area," said Albert Ferré, vice president of the Global LegalTech Hub.
