The online event counted on counsel, partners and CEOs of prestigious law firms and multinational companies

Iberian Lawyer hosted yesterday the event Legaltech Connect Spain web edition under the title: "Legaltech and the impact on law firms' accounts: What happens to the added value?", where partners, counsel and Legal directors and members of the sector had a space to talk about the incursion of technology in the Legal field, as well as the changes that have been triggered by it.

The event was presented by LC Publishing Group & Iberian Legal Group managing editor Ilaria Iaquina, moderated by Iberian Lawyer & Latin American Lawyer journalist Antonella Puntriano, with the support of the law firm ECIIJA.

Questions from the online audience, together with contributions from the following speakers, allowed for a debate on how the use of technology has changed legal processes:

The webinar discussed how technology has helped to accelerate time-consuming processes, which has created new opportunities for lawyers to prepare themselves in other aspects. While some said they felt pressure from clients to implement technology, the main conclusion was that the focus should be on providing solutions to clients through the use of technology, which will be a great support to be more efficient, but where the added value and work of a lawyer will not be replaced by machines in the near future.
