Linklaters has advised CK Hutchison, the Hong Kong-based conglomerate, on the €10 billion sale of its large portfolio of telecommunications towers assets in Europe to Cellnex, the Spanish telecoms infrastructure company. CK Hutchison is the latest mobile network operator to carve-out mast infrastructure to reduce debt and raise funds to invest in 5G network upgrades.

The six transactions involve the acquisition of circa 24,600 sites for a total of €10 billion: €8.6 billion in cash and €1.4 billion in the form of new Cellnex shares, representing a stake of circa 5 per cent in Cellnex's capital at UK's closing. The transactions include the roll-out of up to 5,250 sites over the next eight years with an investment of c. €1.4 billion including further initiatives.

According to the agreed terms, Cellnex will enter three new markets: Austria, Sweden and Denmark, which will extend the geographic footprint of the company's operations to a total of twelve European countries. It will also result in Cellnex expanding its presence in the key markets of Italy, Ireland and the UK, in which the volume of assets under management will double. After completion Cellnex will have 103,000 towers and telecommunications sites.

Cellnex and CK Hutchison will sign long term service contracts for an initial period of 15 years extendable for an additional 15 years.

The series of transactions are subject to formal closing conditions, including, where applicable, clearance from competition authorities. It is expected to complete them on a staggered and per country basis over the next 18 months.
