Nicolau S. Fonollar Bennasar, from Nowinnofee, has secured compensation for two first-class travellers that were denied boarding, in a lawsuit against the US giant

What should have been resolved in an extra-judicial standard claim procedure finished in the courtroom with a young Majorcan lawyer face to face against an American giant. The largest airline in the world declined to accept the passengers' claim after being denied boarding with their boarding passes already printed and reassigned their seats claiming that they didn't show early enough to check-in their luggage.

After a series of unsuccessful claims rejected by the airline, a lawsuit was filed by Nicolau S. Fonollar Bennasar (pictured), a young lawyer member of the Balearic Islands Bar Association since 2019, and expert in the defence of passengers' rights that offers airline claim services through a very agile digital system, and who practises from his own Palma de Mallorca-based lawfirm Nowinnofee.

The judge has ruled in favour of the plaintiff, ordering a €7,165 compensation. The airline has announced that it will not appeal, making the sentence final.
