Montero Aramburu has hired former Community of Madrid director general of trade and consumption María José Pérez-Cejuela as an adviser.

Pérez-Cejuela (pictured) has extensive experience in public administration and private enterprise. In the public sector, she has held various positions working for the Community of Madrid including director general of Madrid excelente, director general of relations with the administration of justice and internal policy, and director general of women in the Ministry of Employment.

As a lawyer she has worked for Uría Menéndez and as an external counsel for the department of recoveries of Caja España.
