Pérez-Llorca and Uría Menéndez have advised on the sale of Quark, a data center engineering company to Sener. Both have signed an agreement whereby Quark benefits from Sener's global presence.

Pérez-Llorca have advised Sener (buyer) and the team consisted of partner Javier Bau and associates Tobías Kálnay and Carlos Gabaldón.

Uría Menéndez has advised Quark (seller) and the team consisted of partner Javier Ruiz-Cámara and associates Yulia Kalyuzhyna and Gabriel Rodríguez Leva.

Sener, the spanish engineering and technology group, becomes the majority shareholder of Quark. Both have signed an agreement whereby Quark benefits from Sener's global presence, with offices in nearly 20 countries, which will favor the internationalization of the data company.

With this acquisition, Sener continues to deepen its diversification into differentiated, customer-oriented products and services with proprietary technology. In the data center sector, it can bring its extensive capabilities in complex technology systems integration and contribute to channeling the enormous energy needs of data processing centers.

Quark's current CEOs, Ricardo Abad and Miguel Gallego, complete the shareholding, and will continue to lead the company.
