RRBS Legal has launched a new labour department with the incorporation of Fermín Magán (pictured).

Magán holds a law degree from the Complutense University and has a background in labour risks and outsourcing. With more than 25 years of experience, he has been part of several labour law firms, such as Grupo Eulen, Unide or Grupo Ocaso, as well as having led his own firm.

The main aim of RBBS Legal, with the creation of the labour department, is to complete the legal advice to national and international clients, and to constitute it as a business unit together with the other areas that the firm already has, such as stock market, commercial, administrative, tax and procedural law.
