RSA-LP promotes four associates to principal lawyers and one principal is the new head of

Family and Successions

André Batoca is an associate in the Public law department, developing his practice in Administrative and Tax law, Sofia Gomes Cardoso develops her entire practice area in the General Litigation department, João Luz Soares has been working in the Criminal law team and collaborates with the General Litigation department, and João Subtil focuses his work on the area of Corporate and Real Estate law, integrating the Corporate department.

Also, Ana Pires, who was already principal lawyer, was appointed head of the Family and Successions area. According with João Ricardo Nóbrega, partner of the firm, "her sensibility and the excellent treatment in the matters of privacy which she develops in her way of carrying cases of this area are highly appreciated by her clients, and that is why we chose her for this position."

"This promotion is an investment in the new generations and in the recognition of the technical quality and personal characteristics of each of these associate lawyers who collaborate with RSA-LP, a network created by law firm RSA- Raposo Subtil e Associados," states the firm.

In the words of António Raposo Subtil, founding partner of RSA-LP, the "bet on this group of young lawyers represents the future strategy and the core of RSA-LP because talent has been a determining factor in the path taken".
