ITALY

Focus on the under 40

The Italian legal profession is experiencing a generational shift of significant proportions.

by vincenzo rozzo

The research conducted by the Research Center of LC Publishing highlights the growing presence, influence, and ambitions of lawyers under 40 within the country’s leading law firms. With under 40 professionals now representing 62% of the total lawyer population among the firms analyzed, the new generation is no longer a peripheral component, it is the engine of renewal driving the modern Italian legal ecosystem. This evolution reflects not only a demographic trend but a deeper cultural transformation. The new cohort of lawyers is characterized by greater mobility, stronger international orientation, and a pragmatic approach to innovation and business development.

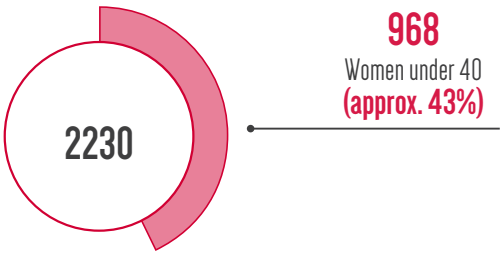

The expanding base of young professionals

With 2,230 lawyers under 40 out of a total of 3,571, the under 40 segment accounts for nearly two-thirds of the workforce in top-tier Italian firms. This represents not just a quantitative majority but a strategic asset for firms aiming to sustain growth and competitiveness in an increasingly globalized market. The generation of digital natives is bringing new energy and different skill sets that are reshaping the nature of legal services and client relationships.

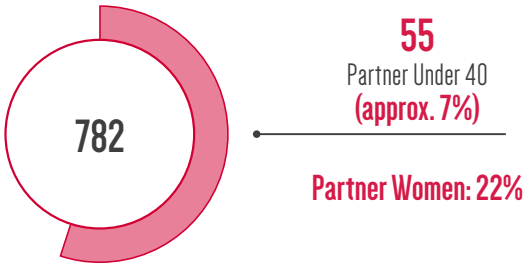

The firms leading this demographic trend are among the most structured and dynamic on the Italian scene. Pirola Pennuto Zei & Associati stands out with 409 lawyers under 40, followed by Gianni & Origoni (296), Legance (269), PedersoliGattai (260), and LCA (178). These figures mirror not only the size of the firms but also their capacity to attract and retain young talent through training, specialization programs, and early exposure to complex transactions.

Gender balance among lawyers under 40

Youth in leadership

M&A as a training ground for the new generation

The M&A departments appear to be the natural incubator for the younger generation of lawyers. According to the research, 68% of lawyers in M&A teams are under 40, a proportion higher than the overall average. This concentration of young professionals in one of the most demanding and competitive practice areas reveals much about the dynamics of professional growth in large firms. M&A remains the field where young lawyers can develop strategic, financial, and negotiation skills that are essential for advancement.

Gender balance

Gender representation among lawyers under 40 shows encouraging yet still imperfect progress. Women account for 43% of lawyers under 40, confirming a steady increase compared to previous years but highlighting that parity has not yet been fully achieved. The numbers suggest that entry barriers have been substantially reduced at the associate level; however, the path to leadership positions remains narrower for women.

The challenge is particularly visible in the partnership data. Only 7% of all partners are under 40, and among them, women represent 22%. This means that while young women are entering the profession in significant numbers, structural and cultural barriers still hinder their progression to the top. The figures point to the need for more inclusive promotion policies and mentoring programs designed to support female leadership in law.

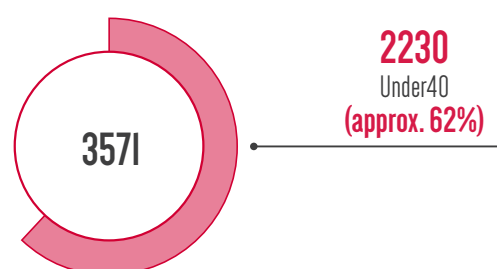

Youth in leadership

The data on partners under 40 confirms that access to leadership remains selective. Out of 782 partners, only 55 are under 40, just 7% of the total. The presence of young partners, however, is no longer an anomaly. Some firms are consciously integrating generational renewal into their governance strategies. Pirola Pennuto Zei & Associati leads with 11 partners under 40, followed by Legance (10), LEXIA (6), PedersoliGattai (5), and LCA (3).

These figures may seem modest, but they signal a gradual evolution in the traditional “pyramid” model of law firms. Younger partners often bring new managerial approaches, greater sensitivity to work-life balance, and a proactive stance toward innovation and digitalization. Their rise reflects an awareness that sustainable growth in the legal industry depends on rejuvenating leadership.  Copyright © 2025, Iberian Lawyer

IBERIA

Focus on the under 40

The Iberian legal market is witnessing a generational shift, with under 40 lawyers representing a dynamic and influential segment of the profession

by vincenzo rozzo

Out of almost 5,000 lawyers, 55% fall into this younger category, highlighting both the depth of talent and the evolving demographics shaping the sector.

M&A departments stand out as a hub for emerging professionals, with 47% of practitioners under 40, reinforcing the centrality of this practice area in attracting and retaining new generations of legal talent. Encouragingly, gender balance is also visible: women account for 47% of lawyers under 40, a sign of gradual but meaningful progress toward parity in a historically male-dominated field.

However, leadership positions remain a challenge for younger professionals. Only 7% of partners are under 40, though women make up a notable 33% of that cohort — an indication that, while the path to partnership is still steep, female lawyers are increasingly present among those breaking through early.

Top 20 firms - lawyers under 40

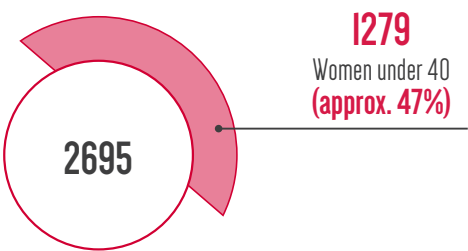

Large full-service firms clearly host some of the biggest concentrations of under 40 talents. KPMG Abogados leads by a wide margin, with 840 lawyers under 40, representing nearly three quarters (73%) of its workforce.

Gómez-Acebo & Pombo follows with 278 lawyers under 40 (56%), while Andersen and Ambar Partners also stand out with high volumes of young lawyers (177 and 175 respectively), showing their appeal as destinations for younger professionals.

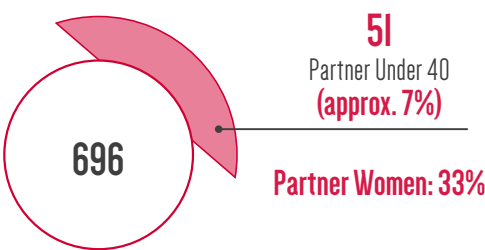

Ejaso and Broseta, despite being comparatively smaller firms, also show a high share of under 40 lawyers, suggesting a strategic focus on building teams with younger profiles. Overall, these figures reflect how the generational shift is not isolated to boutique practices but is reshaping the structure of top-tier Iberian firms.

Gender balance among lawyers under 40

Youth in leadership

Partners under 40

Leadership among younger lawyers remains scarce, with the exception of Ambar Partners, where, due to the structure of the firm, all lawyers in the network are in fact partners. However, some firms are breaking the trend. Ejaso stands out with 6 partners under 40, a significant share (14% of its partnership).

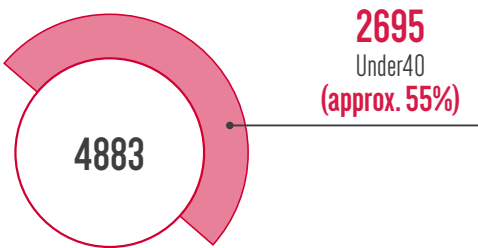

Abreu Advogados also shows strong representation, with 5 partners under 40, reflecting its openness to early promotions. Among the larger players, KPMG counts 4 partners under 40 (around 6% of its partnership), while Gómez-Acebo & Pombo, Andersen, RocaJunyent, Dower, and CCSL each have 3, though relative to their overall partner base this represents a much smaller proportion.

These differences suggest that firm culture and promotion policies strongly influence the pace at which younger lawyers reach leadership, with some mid-sized firms appearing more flexible than the larger, traditional ones.
